

TERTIARY EDUCATION UNION

We are the people who make tertiary education happen. We teach and support the next generation of nurses, doctors, teachers, electricians and builders and around 8000 of us are on strike today.

Why are we striking? Because students deserve a learning environment where excellent teaching and research is consistently delivered.

But right now, people working in tertiary education are struggling with the cost of living and need pay rises that help them meet it. Over half of these people don't have permanent work and they're overstretched in their work. We need pay that keeps up with costs and we need secure jobs. This is why we are on strike.
